Mark Higuchi was the second son of Japanese immigrants born in California. A quiet, thoughtful child, he showed no sign of what he might eventually become. He did show signs of intelligence - in fact he was, in many ways, the classic Asian nerd, although he expressed his hatred of that stereotype as, often, the only time he spoke up.

His parents both held down office jobs, but when he was sixteen, his father became disabled after an accident caused by a drunk driver. Suddenly, the family was poor, and his college fund was rapidly eaten up - along with the rest of his savings - as they struggled to survive on only his father's disability. The man needed full time care, and Mark's mother had to provide it.

He was determined to fix the situation, but the best he could do was flip burgers - so he turned to theft. He found he liked it, but one day he stole the wrong item - or maybe the right one. Armed with a stone that allowed him to manipulate shadows, he went from thief to master thief to criminal mastermind, although unknown to most he gives most of the money he steals away, keeping only enough for a lower middle class lifestyle for himself.

He conceals his name, race, even his gender, and most people only know about Nightshade. They don't know about the complexities behind who he is. Or particularly care.

Hero Adventure Hooks

Stop, Thief! - Some valuable jewelry has been stolen, and the indications are that Nightshade was behind it. Even finding him, though, might prove challenging. One of his minions was caught during the heist, but the woman isn't talking. Can the PCs prove Nightshade's involvement and perhaps even capture the elusive master thief?

Rob The Rich And - A computer hacker has removed a lot of money from the bank account of a local billionaire. He asks the heroes to help, but when they trace the clues they find.

Nightshade...and they find that he's given all of the money away to allow residents to buy and fix up the slum apartments they live in. Who's the real bad guy here - the law abiding but unpleasant billionaire or the Robin Hood-esque thief?

Villain Adventure Hooks

You're Going To Do What With The Money? - Nightshade hires the PCs to 'liberate' a large quantity of cash, in return for a cut, of course. But when you find out he intends to give it away, do you decide you want a larger cut? After all, you could make much better use of it than the local homeless shelter, right?

Out Of Your Depth - Nightshade regularly hires people to do heists for or with him. This time, he's along for the ride, but it seems that all of his enemies have somehow found out. Do you stay bought and help him deal with what feels like all of the heroes in the city or do you duck out on him?
